

In relationships, we all have disagreements, tension, and stress. When we do, we need to step back and remember that love makes allowances for other people's faults and weaknesses. Love covers a wrong done to it. You need to rise above petty things that are pulling you apart. Give people room to have a bad day. When they are rude, don't respond. Be an eagle and rise above it. Life is too short for you to live at odds, being contentious, and arguing over things that don't matter. Some people have to have the last word in every argument. Don't be hardheaded. Let it go. Stop wasting your energy. You have a pre-ordained destiny in Christ to fulfill. You have an assignment to accomplish. Don't let distractions pull you off course. Don't waste your valuable time and energy on someone or something that is not moving you toward your true purpose.

1 Peter 4:8 "Most important of all, continue to show deep love for each other, for love covers a multitude of sins."
