

Most of us don't like times of waiting. We are interested in the destination, but God is interested in the journey. When we understand that He is working in us along the way, waiting and patience become a part of the process. When you stay faithful in the waiting times, when you don't get impatient and complain because it's taking so long, when you don't get upset because the door closed, when you are travelling steadily along God's pathway and honouring Him, He will give you every blessing.

You won't need to make it happen in your own strength, and you won't need to manipulate people or try to force the door to open. God will give you the position, give you the spouse, give you the influence etc. Don't fight the wait time. You are not falling behind. God has already lined up the blessings He is going to give you. He has already put your name on things bigger and better than you have ever imagined. Now keep travelling steadily, and keep trusting Him even when you don't see anything happening.

Psalm 37:34 "Don't be impatient for the Lord to act! Keep travelling steadily along His pathway and in due season He will honour you with every blessing, and you will see the wicked destroyed."