

God will deliver believers from trouble, but you need to look at it in a new light. When you order an item online, the courier company delivers it to you. "Deliver" means they transport it from one location to another. It may take five stops along the way before it is delivered to you. In the same way, right now God is delivering you from trouble. You are en route, and there may be some stops along the way. But don't worry, you are not delivered yet. You are in debt, but God is delivering you into abundance. You are dealing with depression, but God is delivering you into joy. When those thoughts from the enemy tell you: "This trouble is permanent. It is never going to change", just shake off the discouragement and answer back: "No, I am being delivered. This trouble is not going to stop me; it is going to transport me." God is going to open new doors, turn impossible situations around, and push you into new levels of your pre-ordained destiny that you would never have experienced without the troubles you face.

Psalm 34:17 "The righteous cry out, and the LORD hears them; He delivers them from all their troubles."
