

Many believers cannot feel good about themselves unless they prove to other people that they are important. They are always having to outdo, outperform, outdrive, and outdress somebody else. If you live in a proving mode, it is as though you are running on a treadmill that never stops. As soon as you prove to one person that you are okay, you will see somebody else you need to impress. It is a never-ending cycle. You need to get off that treadmill. It is very freeing when you realize you don't need to prove anything to anyone. What God thinks of you is what is truly important.

Are you trying to prove your value by who you know, what you wear, or what you drive? Learn to be secure in who you are - you are a son / daughter of the Most High God. You belong to God. Whether you are wearing Mr Price, Gucci or Calvin Klein, to God your value never changes. You don't need to have popularity, possessions, or performance to feel good about yourself. You don't need to prove anything to anyone.

Job 15:31 "Let him not deceive himself by trusting what is worthless, for he will get nothing in return."
