

In Mark 5, Jesus took a boat to the eastern side of the Sea of Galilee, where He encountered a wild man who lived among the tombs. The man was possessed by demons. Jesus cast out the demons, and the difference that came over the man was astonishing. When Jesus boarded the boat to leave, the man begged to go with Him. But Jesus told him to return home and tell his friends what great things the Lord had done for him. The man did so, and became one of Christ's first evangelists, proclaiming the Lord Jesus to the ten cities of the Galilean Decapolis - "and all marvelled". (Mark 5:20)

Few things glorify the Lord more than the changed lives of His people and their testimonies about His amazing grace and mercy. If Christ has made a difference in your life, at every opportunity tell others about it.

Mark 5:19 "Go home to your friends, and tell them what great things the Lord has done for you, and how He has had compassion on you."
