

In 1 Samuel 10, after Saul was chosen to be the first king of Israel, most of the people were happy and congratulated him. But when Saul went back home, some of the people spoke of him with contempt and despised him. They said he didn't have what it took to be king, and they tried to push him down. Saul refused to waste his time with these small-minded people who didn't value who he was or respect the talent and favour on his life. He simply chose to ignore them.

If you are going to reach your destiny, you need to get good at ignoring negative comments, criticism, insults, and naysayers. They don't control your destiny. They are distractions from the enemy to try to keep you from God's best. Instead of getting upset over who is not for you and frustrated over who is trying to make you look bad, ignore them. Jealous people cannot keep you from your destiny. Small-minded people cannot stop your purpose. That is not a battle you need to fight. Let God vindicate you.

1 Samuel 10:27 "But some worthless men said: "How can this man save and rescue us?" They regarded Saul with contempt and did not bring him a gift. But he ignored the insult and kept silent."
