

23 years after David died, his son King Solomon had married foreign wives and started worshipping their idols. He knew better, but he let his heart turn away from the Lord. God could have taken Solomon's kingdom from him, but He said that for the sake of David, He would not do it while Solomon was alive. David started a blessing, and even after he died, his children walked in the blessing. They received mercy because of how he lived.

The decisions we make every day don't just affect our lives, they affect generations to come. When you make decisions that honour God, when you are generous and faithful, it is being credited to your children's account, to your grandchildren, to future generations. Just as there is a generational curse of negatives that can be passed down, there is a generational blessing. God is keeping an account of every good thing you do. That is not being overlooked. It is accruing mercy, favour, and blessing in your family's account. You can be the one to set your family on a new course of blessing.

1 Kings 11:11-12 "You have been unfaithful to Me and have broken My covenant and laws; therefore, I will remove the kingdom from your rule and hand it over to your servant. But in honour of your father, David, who was always faithful to me, I will not remove the kingdom from you while you are alive; however, I will take it from your son."
