

Anytime we try to move forward, thoughts will come telling us what we cannot do, how the problem is too big etc. We know what God promised, we believe it in our heart, but Satan comes like a roaring lion, bombarding our mind with doubts. The purpose of a lion's roar is to intimidate any opponent, to strike fear and terror, so much so that it will paralyze the other animal and get it to back down.

In the same way, our enemy loves to 'roar' in our thoughts. "You will never get well. You will never break the addiction. You will never get out of debt." etc. How you handle the roar will determine whether or not you reach your destiny. If you believe the lies and let the fear take root, it will keep you from seeing the promise. You need to learn to ignore the roar. Satan goes about "like" a roaring lion - he is not a lion, and he doesn't have any power over you. He is a coward. The only power he has, is the power you give him by believing the roar.

1 Peter 5:8 "Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary Satan walks about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour."
