

Moses grew up in Egyptian royalty, with the finest education of the day in leadership, business, and government. He also grew up with the sense of God's calling on his life. Deep down, he knew he was supposed to deliver his people from the oppression of the Egyptians. But he made a mistake (killed an Egyptian slave-driver) and ended up living in the wilderness for 40 years. That could have seemed like a waste, like he had missed his calling, but God was using that time to teach Moses how to survive in the desert, and give him the skills he would eventually need to lead the people through the wilderness.

You may have made mistakes and veered off course, but know that God's calling on your life is irrevocable. He doesn't change His mind. He uses the delays, the wrong turns, the bad breaks, and the 'wilderness season' to move you toward your purpose. God sees the big picture, and is preparing you and positioning you to fulfill your assignment, to get you into your 'Promised Land', and to become all you were created to be.

Romans 11:29 "For the gifts and the calling of God are irrevocable."
