

When Job was going through his trials, he and his friends often questioned whether justice was being served. Job's friends thought that he deserved punishment, but Job could not understand why God let him suffer so greatly. However, the great points of the book of Job are that God will never do anything wicked, and the Almighty will never pervert justice.

You may be going through some situations that are not fair, not just. But as time goes by, it will be amazing how you can look back and see God's hand of goodness, justice, vindication and restoration. You can trust Him with difficult days, and challenging seasons. Remember the wise saying: "When you cannot trace God's hand, you can trust His heart."

Job 34:12 "Surely God will never do wickedly, nor will the Almighty pervert justice."
